

Stand 17 – 18 Agilent Technologies Sweden AB

Agilent is the world's premier measurement company that works in close collaboration with engineers, scientists, and researchers around the globe to meet the communications, electronics, life sciences, and chemical analysis challenges of today and tomorrow.

Agilent holds many product and market leadership positions, including being first worldwide in overall test and measurement products.

Agilent's electronic measurement business provides standard and customized electronic measurement instruments and systems, monitoring, management and optimization tools for communications networks and services, software design tools and related services that are used in the design, development, manufacture, installation, deployment and operation of electronics equipment and communications networks and services.

www.agilent.com