If there are special grounds a deferment to begin studies for students who are admitted to an education may be granted. Specific reasons for the deferment of taking up studies may be social, medical or other special grounds such as care for children, student union assignments or postponed leave of absence from your employer in accordance with Swedish legislation on leave of absence for studies. The deferment period may not exceed 18 months unless there are exceptional reasons for a long time. A new application to the education must be made in time on www.universityadmissions.se and a copy of the deferment decision sent or uploaded with the application for the semester that the studies should be initiated.

Appeals: If the application is rejected, you may appeal. The appeal must be in writing. The letter should state what is being appealed and the desired change. The letter should be sent to the University Appeals Board (ÖHN), but sent to the person who made the decision at the University of Gävle (HiG), 801 76 Gävle, Sweden. It must reach the HiG within three weeks after the day you received the decision.
